

Ragdoll

In appearance, the Ragdoll is a well-balanced cat with no one feature overpowering another. Females are noticeably smaller than males. Full maturity of colour in Pointed Ragdolls is not achieved until two years of age and full size and weight is not expected for at least five years. Ragdolls are renowned for their sweet and gentle natures. Ragdolls should be lifted and carried with two hands and never dangled.

The ideal Ragdoll is a large, imposing, strongly built cat with an elongated body, moderately long legs and plumed tail in proportion to the body. Type, size and conformation are the three most important attributes to be assessed.

HEAD	Size in proportion to body. Broad modified wedge with slightly rounded contours. Fur creates an appearance of a flat plane between the ears. Full cheeks in line with the wedge, tapering to a rounded strong muzzle. Strong jaw and chin. Forehead slightly rounded, merging into a gentle concave curve that ends in a straight medium length nose. A slightly retrousse tip to the nose is desirable.
EARS	Medium in size, wide set and slightly flared. Wide at base with rounded tips and tilting slightly forward. It is desirable for the outer edge of the ear to follow the line of the wedge.
EYES	Large, oval in shape, slightly oblique and set wide apart.
NECK	Short and strong.
BODY	Large and long, solid, muscular and broad chested with substantial boning. Equally massive across the shoulders and hindquarters. May have fat pad on lower abdomen.
LEGS	Legs are medium to long with substantial boning. Hind legs slightly longer than front legs.
PAWS	Proportionately large, Round and tufted.
TAIL	Long, in proportion to body, tapering slightly to tip. Plumed.
COAT	Silky, dense and of medium length. Ruff and trousers preferred. Allowances to be made for entire animals and seasonal variations.
